Thousands of Women to Begin Distribution of "Garden Primer"

A statewide "Agricultural Day" has been set for next Wednesday, April 18. On this day every one in the state with land suitable for cultivation will be urged to plant vegetables, to branch out, if feasible, into the raising of pigs and chickens—to do his bit, in other words, toward provisioning the country and her allies against the parlous times in immediate prospect.

"Agricultural Day" is the product of a decision arrived at between George W. Perkins, chairman of the Mayor's Food Supply Committee, the State College of Agriculture at Cornell, the Agricultural Division of Columbia University and the National League for Woman's Service. City dwellers who have no suitable ground to cultivate will be asked for their moral and yoral support in the campaign to invocal support in the campaign to in-crease the productive acreage of the

To Spread "Garden Primer"

In the meantime the thousands of women enrolled in the National League for Woman's Service will begin the distribution of Mr. Perkins's "Garden "Bert" Hoover, as Stanford men know him, was one of the first gradu-ates in mining turned out by Leland Primer." At a conference at the home of Mrs. August Belmont, 820 Fifth Avenue, Mr. Perkins made it clear that the food problem was proposed to President Wilson by Representative Lever.

Mr. Lever said that drastic steps would have to be taken to meet the serious world shortage of food supply if America is to feed 'er own people and aid in providing for the wants of the Vietnes countries. He make of the vietness countries were as an ordinary miner at $2 a day, but soon managed to find desk room as a mining engineer in San Francisco. From there he went to Australia and made a fortune out of an abandoned gold mine, by subjecting it to modern methods. the approach of the planting season necessitated the primer's immediate and wide dissemination. For this purand wide dissemination. For this purpose, he said, the county branches of the League for Woman's Service and the other women's organizations throughout the state provided the best machinery. Cyrus C. Miller, Miss Gertrude Robinson-Smith, state chairman of the league, and Mrs. Mary E. Hamilton, chairman of the league's agricultural division, attended the conference. The league announced later that it would have primers on hand the shortage of farm labor, declaring it was a question for serious consideration whether men for work on the farms should not be drafted just as the Administration plans to conscript the shortage of the army should not be drafted just as the Administration plans to conscript the shortage of the army should be shorted by the short of the short of the North Stinn as mining expert for the North China government shortly before the Boxer revolt. When that rebellion occurred he hurried Mrs. Hoover, also a stanford graduate, to Tien-Tsin, and together they went through the siege. that it would have primers on hand by next Monday for all who applied, besides sending large numbers to its county headquarters to be distributed

Potato Seed at Cost

The league also announced that a wealthy business man, who had bought up 100 carloads of potatoes when the price was less than half the present figure, had offered to sell the potatoes through the league at cost to those who would agree to use them only as seed and to save the harvest for public use. Two houses at 257 and 259 Madison Avenue have been given to the erties.

The Boy Scouts of America are to be no less busy than the women in the campaign for more food. This morning O. H. Benson, special agent of the Department of Agriculture at Washington, will confer at Scout headquarters, 200 Fifth Avenue, with James E. West, chief scout executive, and other officers of the organization, on plans West, chief scout executive, and other officers of the organization, on plans for the cooperation of the Boy Scouts throughout the country. cies and mobilize farm labor for the production of larger crops. It would lead to conservation of farmers and farmhands, he said, and encourage the farmer to increase his crops with the assurance that his supply of labor would not be decreased or cut off.

"You can turn out a soldier in a year," said Senator Freiinghuysen, "but it takes five years to turn out a competent farmhand. Already the best farmhands are preparing to enlist."
